Table 1: Unified criteria of the Traffic Light Tool (Brook, 2013).

| Green | Representative of safe and healthy psychological and physical development and require a response positively to reinforce the behaviours. The TLT emphasises that expression of sexuality via sexual behaviour is a naturally evolving process and that the presentation of green behaviours should be utilised as an opportunity for positive reinforcement and as an avenue for providing additional education and support. (Brook, 2013)  |
|-------|---|
| Amber | Behaviours that are outside of the parameters of being healthy and safe and may be indicative of harmful sexual behaviour,  Recommended action when behaviours that fall within the amber category emphasise the need for gathering information about the individual, their behaviour and the context in which the behaviour has taken place. The initial recognition of amber behaviour may be the first steps in an intervention process and the TLT refers professionals to their own internal safeguarding practices for which action to take. Brook (2013) emphasise that, whilst it is important for professionals to take action when amber behaviours are displayed, the emphasis appears to be on information gathering and monitoring to assess the next steps, rather than immediate intervention. |
| Red   | Red behaviours are defined as being conclusively outside healthy and safe parameters, with some, but not all being illegal, and are harmful to the individual and potentially those around them. The TLT advises that immediate action and intervention is required when a red is presented. Emphasis appears to be upon gaining guidance from current legislation, policies, guidance, risk to the young person or others and the context in which the behaviour takes place. It advises that internal safeguarding policies are followed and that this behaviour cannot be ignored or solely monitored and that action needs to take place.  (Brook, 2013)  |

Categories and specific behaviours

Table 6: The Traffic Light Tool Training Session

| Task   | Action   |
|--|--|
| 01 . Introduction                         | Describe the purpose of the sexual behaviours traffic light tool, and how it works.  |
| 02. Group agreement                              | Produce a list of statements which participants agree to follow during the session/ programme.  Create a positive atmosphere within the group, where participants feel happy to share their opinions.                  |
| 03 . Safeguarding and the law quiz        | Determine if facts around safeguarding young people and the law are true or false.   |
| 04 . Values continuum                     | Clarify how their own values impact on making decisions using the tool.  Describe how their own values impact on making decisions using the tool.  |
| 05 . Demonstration and use of the toolkit | Demonstrate using the tool appropriately. Describe the purpose of the tool. Describe the benefits of the tool. Explain the importance of a common language in relation to developmental and harmful sexual behaviours. |
| 06 . Scenarios and carousel               | Demonstrate responding to a range of situations/sexual behaviours in all categories. Identify if a situation is red, amber or green on the tool.   |
| 07. Action planning                              | Create an action plan for how and when they will use the tool and how it relates to their local safeguarding procedures.   |
| 08 . Closure and Evaluation               | Evaluate the training.   |

Table 7: Coding

| Conceptual   | The codes linked directly to the Kirkpatrick Model levels of evaluating training. |
|--------------|---|
|              | These levels were then broken down further as advised by Kirkpatrick and          |
|              | coded as Attitude, Knowledge and Skills   |
| Pre-Ordained | Codes were pre-defined using the RQ as a basis.                                   |
| Descriptive  | Open coding was used to explore that data and highlight any emerging              |
|              | themes that were not directly linked to the pre-ordained or conceptual codes.     |

Table 10: Types of behaviour experienced by role

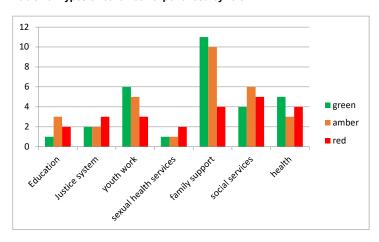

Table 11: Verbatim examples of changes in relation to risk

Main Theme More clarity

'we put all of our volunteers onto the traffic light tool training as well, so it gives them a common place to work from and like we say, a lot of our volunteers have had different backgrounds, they might have been, some of them historically might have been through their own difficulties, so it gives you a good way of not going on a personal judgement and saying, well, actually, this is what it is, so yeah, its clarified risk for everyone really'.

'I think it's because when things are presented to you, you do get caught up in the details of things and like I said, the kind of, the toolkit almost gives that clarity'.

'I think there is a better understanding, absolutely and I think there's a common idea around what is risky and when a child is actually at risk, yeah'.

Main theme Multiagency working [process]

'there's been a lot of awareness raising and training on risk from that particular team, you know, there's been a team set up in Cornwall to deal with that and this traffic light tool has been sort of introduced as part of that'

|                               | 'we've amended our risk policies as a result of being on the training and read through them and yeah, like I say, it's that information sharing that we have talked about a lot more. |
|-------------------------------|---|
| MainThemeNochange | 'No, I don't think so, I think we've always been pretty hot on that [risk] and good on that, so sexual health wise, we still give the same advice and we do the same things'.         |

Table 12: Verbatim examples of category cross over

Categorised green behaviour (maps into Amber)

'I have dealt with a young person, aged 15, who is engaging in consensual sexual activity, but was not using any contraception' (age group 13-17)
